Human trafficking, the U.N. calls it a modern form of slavery. It's not something we associate with life here in the United States. And while more than half of trafficking victims are in Asia and the Pacific, it is happening in this country too... the U.S. is home to roughly 60,000 people who live in slave-like conditions.

It's an issue that's come to the attention of Republican Representative Ed Royce of California, the chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. Royce recently introduced legislation aimed at combating international human trafficking.

Combating Human Trafficking

"Women and children being bought and sold is deplorable, and shockingly this criminal trade is happening around the world and right here in Southern California."

U.S. REP. ED ROYCE

Thanks to Rep. Ed Royce's leadership, his committee passed three bills to combat human trafficking:

- Human Trafficking Prioritization Act prioritizes the fight against human trafficking without increasing the size of the Federal Government.

- International Megan's Law to Prevent Demand for Child Sex Trafficking to protect children from sex trafficking by providing foreign governments with advance notice of intended travel by registered child-sex offenders.
- Human Trafficking Prevention Act requires State Department personnel undergo training to identify victims of human trafficking around the world.
